

Please do not allow cell phones to be used during a flight. Why people feel they need to talk so loudly into those things no matter where they are, I don't know, but to communicate over the noise in the air craft cabin will take even louder talking. For longer flights in such cramped quarters (maybe first class passengers could handle it better) it's hard enough dealing with physical encroachment into your seating area it would be awful to deal with verbal encroachment as well. Even separate seating won't help, I can see it now. All those people sitting together trying to yell over each other's conversations. Thank you for listening.
